“disABILITY” FOUNDATION LAUNCHES NEW WEBSITE

National Transition Resource for “disAbility” Community

BIRMINGHAM, AL—The Full Life Ahead Foundation (FLAF), Birmingham, AL, an organization providing national “disAbility” transition support, announces the launch of its new website today.

“The Full Life Ahead Foundation’s new website will be able to serve the national disAbility community better than ever before,” says Judy Barclay, President Emeritus and CO-Founder of the Full Life Ahead Foundation. “Families, individuals and educators now have quick and easy access to the proven resources used by the Foundation to successfully bring hope into the lives of those with disAbilities.”

For instance, visitors to the website can watch videos or read personal testimonies of individuals who, through the transition services provided by FLAF, are now achieving their dreams of employment, lifestyle and beyond.

The Foundation’s highly successful HOPE TEAM plan is also outlined on the new website. One of the building blocks to success used by FLAF staff and partners, this plan walks users through a step-by-step process of building support between and in communities and families so that individuals can discover, set and realize goals and dreams. A video describing the HOPE TEAM approach is also available for viewing.

And of course, the Foundation’s popular, self-published workbook, “Full Life Ahead: A Workbook and Guide to Adult Life for Students with disAbilities and Their Families.” which has a global distribution and has been vetted by the Department of Education’s Office of Special Education Programs, is offered for purchase both in English and Spanish.

“We invite anyone who is or will be working through the process of transition – a process for which planning can never begin too early – to visit our website and put our free resources to work for them,” says Barclay.
